DIRECTOR'S NOTE

The ambulatory show LATERNA is composed of five short acts. It's the second part of a diptych dedicated to the theme of forced displacement, and is conceived for the public space.

REBETIKO, a puppet and holographic projections show created in November of 2020, is its first chapter, inspired by Yiorgos Karakantzas' family story of exile, who went from Asia Minor to Europe in 1922.

LATERNA shifts between past and present, between History and current events, and gives a voice to those who still use the same routes to migrate from the Eastern Mediterranean to the West.

Through music and image creation, we try to underline how much the culture uniting these people since the beginning of time doesn't stop at frontiers drawn on a map. This common culture is what we aim to understand through the exploration of various short acts.

First and foremost, a Laterna is a mechanical piano that works with a cylinder where a thousand small nails action little hammers. Each of them correspond to a music note. It's a portable piano invented by an Italian musician from Istanbul in the middle of the 19th century, that mainly plays the repertoire of greek popular songs from that time.

Given its origins, this instrument is the perfect embodiment of cultural mix. The Laterna has also wandered the streets of numerous eastern mediterranean cities, creating thus a common and multicultural repertoire. It accompanied refugees from that time to the four ends of the globe.

During my childhood, in northern Greece, I had the chance to assist the strolls and wanders of a Laterna in the city streets and public places.

I keep a very vivid memory of the synergy it created. A diversified population stood together in front of the instrument's sounds, sounds which emanated themselves from different cultures.

As a result, I don't want to speak of folklore nor of past nostalgia with this show, but of how this instrument embodies traces of these migrations, linking the past to the present.

CREATION PROCESS

MAPPING THE ROAMED LANDSCAPES / VIDEO TRACES

First phase of creation :

- Encounters with displaced populations through territorial residencies
- Collecting stories and exchanges through arts and crafts workshops led by artists during the residencies

It all began with the idea of sharing childhood memories with displaced individuals that we met during the residencies in Greece, Amiens, Port de Bouc/ Martigues, Lebanon and South Africa.

After that, we initiated workshops with the same individuals working on material such as clay, paint, paper or shadow theater which allowed us to elaborate mock-ups in order to represent the intimate spaces of each individual.

The final step was for us to imagine, all together, a future utopian world where each and everyone of us can find his or her place.

Work steps through 4 encounters and workshops :

- August 2021, Athens : collaboration with the Refugees School of Piraeus and the Ayousaya! Company
- January/February 2022 Port de Bouc & Martigues : collaboration with the MJC (House of the Young and Culture) and the Fabien Menot Center, as well as the Théâtre le Sémaphore, contracted venue (coproducer).
- March 2022, Amiens : collaboration with the le Cardan association and the Tas de Sable/Ches Panses Vertes National Puppet Center, about to be coproducer),
- April 2022, Beyrouth : collaboration with the Hammana Artist House and intervention at the Chatila camp with One Hand Puppet

Each of these encounters was filmed and resulted in a short film, presented alongside the forms performed in the public space, shedding light on the creative process and the people involved during the workshop encounters.

THE FORMS

LATERNA, is a project made of several short acts that tell stories of uprooting, be they real or fictional, and bring the audience into a personal and musical odyssey. It's an ambulatory puppet theater show that allows great proximity with the public.

Traditionally, puppets are a fairground element. As a result, wandering is part of its artistic identity and its multiple forms reflect the rich ways in which crossing cultures can be achieved.

Four short, universal, poetic and wordless acts come to life thanks to the metaphorical power that emanates from puppet art. These forms constitute the fragments of an odyssey which will constantly evolve and be enhanced thanks to new elements throughout the territorial residencies.

The performances will take place in the public space and places where encounters happen. Like an illusions or utopia street peddler, we open our suitcases at the corner of a street. Each suitcase presents small scenes to about fifteen people. The actors, travelers off to meet the audience, carry their own suitcase. They are the witnesses of a story of forced displacement, while behind them stands the Laterna, symbolizing and evoking their common past.

Going off to meet the audience in spaces that weren't destined to that is something the company initiated in 2014 when they collaborated with the Mucem (Museum of European and Mediterranean Civilizations) and the Natural History Museum of Marseille. Short acts allowed us then to present shows in unusual places, on the city's beaches, parcs or museums, and allowed us to reach an audience that had limited access to such opportunities, such as people who were hospitalized, incarcerated, or held in foster homes. This allowed us to create something spectacular in unexpected places.

EPILOGUE

The timelength of the performance requires studying in order to adapt our suggestions to each space and to each audience. Because here, more than anywhere else, the performances are thought with the audience, by interacting with them and their reactions. LATERNA is an adaptable show, meaning the short acts can be adapted to be hosted and performed by two, three or four acts according to space and time.

In addition to the presentation of each form, we also want to suggest the screening of the short films created during the territorial residencies.

The show allows the youngest audiences to become aware and reflect upon a timeless issue ; population migrations. We also suggest practical workshops revolving around the show, that aim to create internal landscapes inspired by the stories we've collected.

Some shows punctuate the company's trajectory : Le Cabaret des Âmes Perdues, Mister H, Yeti, Yeti pas ?, Ikare, Le Rêve de la Joconde, Mijaurées, Gojira, Entrelacs, Mécanique, Rebetiko, Engrenage...

Both also regularly collaborated on their own sides with various other companies, thus absorbing other experiences and other artistical worlds. They are both members of different professional and art movement organizations (THEMAA, Scènes d'Enfance et d'Ailleurs, PoleM...). Anima Théâtre fights for a better networking of puppeteers, artists and audiences intrigued by this theatrical art. Besides creating shows, Anima Théâtre tries to reach out to wider audiences about puppets art through workshops, seminars, events and meetings. In 2013, Anima Théâtre turned towards programming with Le Marché noir des Petites Utopies, biennale des petites formes marionnettiques which invites the public to discover an art that's constantly innovating while still keeping its traditions alive.

In 2020, Claire Latarget left the company to make her own way. Yiorgos Karakantzas continues to lead the art direction of the company. REBETIKO, his first creation, part of a diptych dedicated to forced displacements, was born in November 2020.

Anima Théâtre is a resident structure of La Friche Belle de Mai in Marseille. Yiorgos Karakantzas is a companion artist at La Garance, the Cavillon national scene since September 2019 and will be for 4 years.
